Company Description:

Jansy Packaging is a service oriented company committed to providing primary and secondary packaging components globally. Jansy specializes in innovative product and package development and with offices in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles, Jansy is available to assist in developing your customized packaging every step of the way. Jansy's unparalleled expertise in design and engineering analysis, together with the company's unique unit tooling capabilities, allows the client to see their ideas come to life in days rather than weeks or months.

New for 2014:

Jansy Packaging has doubled in size since the start of 2013 following a formal merger with Burgopak USA. This merger has added a number of capabilities including concept development, photorealistic renderings, detailed manufacturing drawings, in-house mockups, prototyping and many more.

New Technologies:

Jansy Packaging is independently designing a project management system that will serve as a secure, 24/7 tool for customers. This system will provide full transparency to any given job with project updates and access to all shared files. When the custom written software is complete this spring, this new technology will improve efficiency and effectiveness of the company's internal operations as well as keep the customer in touch from the original concept to the delivered, finished product.
